having speakers, representing different religious denominations, conduct vespers at the college on Sunday afternoon. The leading ministers and clergy of New London, Norwich, Hartford and New Haven are annually spoken at the vespers services, and several times during the semester prominent philanthropists and leaders from larger cities and towns have been the guests of the college on the weekly gatherings. Attendance at vespers on Sunday afternoon, at five o'clock, is not obligatory, but the services are always popular and well attended and add greatly to the college life of the growing community. Membership in the college choir is limited to forty and two points of academic credit are allowed for regular attendance at services and rehearsals. Tryouts for the choir are held annually.

Mrs. John E. Wells, dramatic coach at the college, entertained faculty and students at afternoon tea at her home on Vauxhall street, New London, on Saturday afternoon from 3-5. The house was attractively decorated with chrysanthemums and ferns and filled with a steady procession of college students throughout the afternoon. Members of the faculty, including Mrs. Wells in pouring and several members of the Dramatic club, assisted in serving. Mrs. Wells is president of the college and a professor of English at the college and one of the most popular members of the faculty.

CONNECTICUT COLLEGE
Gypsy Smith, Jr., the popular evangelist who is conducting services at the Central Baptist church, Norwich, was the principal speaker at the vespers service at Connecticut college Sunday afternoon. The gymnasium, where the vespers services are held, the college campus lacking a chapel, was filled with students, faculty and visitors who heard the well-known speaker with great interest and appreciation. The college choir in cap and gown, led by Dr. Louis Coccone, director of music at the college, furnished the musical programme for the services, and occupied seats on the platform.

One of the fundamental principles of the college, since its opening five years ago, has been the custom of having speakers, representing different religious denominations, conduct vespers at the college on Sunday afternoon. The leading ministers and clergy of New London, Norwich, Hartford and New Haven are annually spoken at the vespers services, and several times during the semester prominent philanthropists and leaders from larger cities and towns have been the guests of the college on the weekly gatherings. Attendance at vespers on Sunday afternoon, at five o'clock, is not obligatory, but the services are always popular and well attended and add greatly to the college life of the growing community. Membership in the college choir is limited to forty and two points of academic credit are allowed for regular attendance at services and rehearsals. Tryouts for the choir are held annually.

SATURDAY GOOD DAY

Saturday was a very good day for the booths on the sales of Christmas seals. Those in the center of the town reaped the benefit of the Saturday shoppers, but Greenville and Norwich Town, in their more limited territory, made an excellent showing. At closing time on Saturday night the booths stood in the following order as regards the amount of money received. It will be interesting to see whether the last three days of the campaign make any change in the order. For-tune's & Mitchell, Uncas bank, Thomas bank, Greenville, Boston store, post-office, Norwich Town, Wauregan house, West Side. Beside these booths, one was set up in Franklin one day last week at a fair which the ladies of the community were holding. A very good sum was realized and put to the credit of the Norwich booths in spite of the fact that many Franklin people had

COUNTY SUNDAY SCHOOLS TO HEAR MISS SLATTERY

On Dec. 18th at 8 o'clock the United church Sunday school will be host to all the church schools of the county, when Miss Margaret Slattery gives an address upon "Stars in the World's Dark Night." Miss Slattery's well known abilities and the interesting subject of her address make it certain that the evening will be a memorable one for all who attend. A general invitation through the committee in charge has been sent to all the schools in the section.
